2010: Johnny Nightelf, Tassos Kolios and Nikos Michalakakos work on Johnny's material and... Thelemite is born!

2011: Thelemite starts the recordings of their first and forthcoming album as a power trio Johnny Nightelf (vocals, guitars), Tassos Kolios (drums) and Nikos Michalakakos (bass). The band's main influences are bands like: Black Sabbath, Ozzy, Savatage, Dokken, Yngwie Malmsteen, Rainbow and Dio making Thelemite's music a powerful mix of classic Heavy, Power and Doom Metal through a modern Dark atmosphere and sound.

The first live performances on the same period accept some cheering reviews.

2012: Recordings and Mixing of the band's debut album are completed with no commitment of any record label. Named "Slave To Desire", it includes 12 tracks and 44 minutes of music. Thelemite is an ambitious project; professionalism and mainstream success are its major targets. Thus and in a way to promote the music and get a contract, the band releases "Slave To Desire - Promo 2012" including 5 own tracks and a cover of Joan Baez's classic anthem Diamonds and Rust.

In October 2012 Thelemite sign with Steel Gallery Records their debut album "Slave To Desire". After a lot of conversation, Kostas (Steel Gallery Recs) persuades the band to add a few more songs from the past that existed only in demo form. Finally they do it and the album gets to 15 songs. At this time, Thelemite are already working on new material for their next album and seeking for live opportunities to promote their work.
